

RACE, ETHNIC AND GENDER STUDIES

The Race, Ethnic and Gender Studies (REGS) program offers undergraduate students an interdisciplinary education focused on understanding how race, ethnicity and gender are related to group identities and experiences. Courses prepare students for dialogues regarding historical and contemporary social dynamics and to identify opportunities for constructive future change. REGS students are enrolled in majors across the university.

MINOR REQUIREMENTS

REGS 200: Introduction to Race, Ethnic and Gender Studies

REGS 300: Theoretical Foundations of Race, Ethnic and Gender Studies

12 Credit Hours of Approved Electives
(that may also count toward your major)

AT HOME IN KANSAS CITY

Kansas City is an ideal place for REGS students. Courses connect students to hands-on learning opportunities, and the department offers internships with organizations that need and value cultural competency. Graduates are employed at the Metropolitan Organization to Combat Sexual Assault (MOCSA), Planned Parenthood, the city of Kansas City, Missouri and more.

ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT

The UMKC Race, Ethnic and Gender Studies Department offers an interdisciplinary curriculum. It teaches critical thinking and provides students the necessary tools to build strategies for a variety of projects and initiatives requiring cultural competencies and to make an impact in a range of fields and professions. The program supports undergraduate internships as well as career infusion courses.

- REGS students will gain the cultural competency that many employers are looking for while working toward their majors.
- REGS courses include experiential learning opportunities and career infusion.
- The internship program provides opportunities for undergraduate students to gain skills and resume-building experiences. Students can earn credit hours toward their REGS minor while placed in internships both on and off campus.

GET INVOLVED

UMKC offers opportunities to participate in student organizations related to REGS, including:
